Comment in Theatrical Circles on Discharged from Bellevine Unre- Wind ratifed the shutters of Mr. L. warded and Out of Work

The theatrical profession, notably one of the most liberal ratherings of men and women, has had a rude shock in the death of the old roan Crehan in a Brock. In Police Court the other day. The event is causing more discussion than outsiders imagine. In fact, it is impossible to passe it glossily over. Said a well-known manager yesterday: "Picture to yoursolf a weather-beaten old Irishman arriving in a new country with his children, settling down, resolved to make a livelihood for himself and for them. But the children have prospered. Ada is perhaps the most prominent acties in and day after day Vonderleith tramped up.

Policeman Hackett met him on the street, and recognizing him as a stranger, halted him. Vonder et h was unable to give a satisfactory account of himself and was arrested.

Then he broke down completely and confessed his theft. The owner of the tools was found. He was Hichard Burtlis and although he was told of how Vonderleith had submitted to bleeding at Bellevue hospital he woud not permit Justice Kelly to dismiss the charge.

Vonderleith was taken to Raymond Street Jail, where he hust await the action of the Grand Jury.

water, each time, took from him all the blood which could be spared without killing him.

Two lives were saved through Vonderleith's fortitude—those of Morris A. Redding, who was found. Oct. 20, unconscious and dying in his room at 936 hast Thirty-fourth street with the gas turned on, and George Jenssen, who blew out the gas at the Sherman House, Dec. 31, and was nearly dead when taken to Bellevue.

Redding now lives, thanks to twelve ounces of Vonderleith's blood which Dr. Cummings transferred by means of a little pump, and Jenssen got no less than twenty ounces, snough to bring him back to life, though it prostrated the generous Vonderleith so that it took him several days to recuperate. There were two other patients who lailed to live, though they received twelve and sixteen ounces of Vonderleith's blood respectively. A report on Broadway was circulated yesterday to the effect that Joseph Haworth would shortly leave the "Paul Kauvar" company, with which he has been associated for so long.

Vonderlieth never received, and was never offered one cent nor even thanked for the lives which he had given back but was turned out into the world with-out a penny and without friends.

Mrs. George Knight started out this season to play a repertoire and met with but scant success. Members of her company left her and seemed to consider themselves anytieved. Mrs. Knight on reaching a city, they said, would receive bad news of her husband and would faint and be unable to appear. Mrs. Knight's courage is commendable, and everybody will be auxious to hear of her success. She has reorganized a company and has started out to play "Over the Garden Wall." Poor Knight's history is a tragedy in itself.
